

Looking forward to the IAAF World Indoor Tour

The 2017 IAAF World Indoor Tour will get under way later this week.

Now in its second year, this year's series has expanded to five meetings. It starts in Boston on 28 January before heading to the German cities of Dusseldorf (1 February) and Karlsruhe (4 February) and then to the Polish city of Torun (10 February) before it concludes in Birmingham on 19 February.

There will be a different set of scoring disciplines in 2017 compared to last year. At the end of the series, the overall winners of each individual discipline will automatically gain a wild card for the IAAF World Indoor Championships Birmingham 2018.

The IAAF Race Walking Challenge will also get under way in the coming weeks with the Oceania 20km Race Walk Championships on 19 February heralding the start of the series.

The 208th IAAF Council Meeting will be held on Monday 6 February at the Riviera Marriott Hotel, Cap d'Ail. Ahead of that gathering, in the week beginning Monday 30 January, the IAAF will welcome about 100 people to Monaco. In total there are 10 meetings taking place including that between the IAAF and Area Associations.

On 19 December 2016, just a fortnight after the IAAF's membership gave an overwhelming 95% vote in favour of constitutional reform, recruitment of four senior positions for the Athletics Integrity Unit (AIU) got underway.

At the core of the reforms, the Athletics Integrity Unit will be a fiercely independent organisation with responsibility for the management of all aspects of the anti-doping programme for international-level athletes and their athlete support personnel as well as for the management of all other integrity-related programmes operated in elite athletics.
